

Hannah Robbins Is Laid To Rest

Largely attended funeral services for Mrs. Hannah Robbins were held in the Second ward chapel Sunday afternoon, with L. L. Nelson, former bishop, in charge.

Mrs. Robbins died Wednesday evening at the home of her son, Lyman Robbins.

"Sister Thou Was't Mild and Lovely," was rendered by the ward choir, and the invocation was offered by George J. Duke. The choir then sang "Rest, Rest for the Weary Soul."

The speakers, each of whom paid glowing tributes to the exemplary life and character of the deceased, were Seth Scott, L. L. Nelson and John F. Thurgood.

Mrs. Marie H. Homer furnished the solo, "O My Father." She was assisted by the choir. "I Know That My Redeemer Lives," was sung by Mrs. Alene C. Simmons and Joseph H. Taylor, and as a closing number, the choir rendered "When First the Glorious Light of Truth."

Jacob L. Jacobson pronounced the benediction, and the grave at the Pioneer city cemetery was dedicated by Seth Scott.

The floral offerings were many and beautiful.
